

Central Midlands

WIND FARM

Tilt Renewables has acquired the Central Midlands Wind Farm project in the Wheatbelt region of Western Australia.

The Central Midlands Wind Farm would contribute to Australia's clean energy future whilst creating local jobs and providing support for community initiatives.

The project is located approximately 140km north of Perth, on the lands of the Yued people near Moora in Western Australia.

This development has a potential capacity of up to 1,100 MW, capable of generating enough clean energy for up to 650,000 homes.

The project team has undertaken investigations over several years to confirm the site's suitability for a wind farm. The project remains subject to further development studies, assessment and approval before it can be constructed.

Benefit sharing

Tilt Renewables shares the benefits of our projects with the communities local to our projects. We offer short and long-term community benefits to local individuals, organisations and businesses – such as community-run organisations providing services to local residents, underrepresented groups, First Nations communities, landcare initiatives, youth and jobseekers. We partner with local programs and initiatives to address the following community needs:

Community Benefit Funds

Education

Sponsorships & Grants

Mental & Physical Wellbeing

Economic Participation

Environmental Initiatives
